My Project Berlin

Classroom Resources for Teachers

The fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989 was one of the most notorious events that signaled the crumbling of the Soviet Union, and the approach of the end of 45 years of the intense ideological conflict and political, economic, and military tension that characterized the Cold War. This year, 2014, marks the 25th anniversary since the fall of the Berlin Wall, and the resources, lesson plans, and classroom projects included here provide excellent ways of encouraging students to explore and further their knowledge of this period in recent world history.

Community and the Cold War

Contained in this resource package are the tools to develop a lesson or major project that integrates Cold War primary source material with the general theme of “community”, while fitting with curriculum guidelines nationwide for students in grades 3 to 12. You are not required to use all of the materials provided, nor are you obligated to participate in any of the accompanying major projects. As an educator, you can pick and choose the content and materials you wish to use, and tailor it according to your own preferences and needs. Should you choose to use any of the major projects as set out in the packages, you will find that you will be able to participate on a number of levels, and will also be provided with the opportunity to have your students’ work featured in an upcoming museum education exhibit here at the Diefenbunker: Canada’s Cold War Museum.

This lesson plan

The Diefenbunker: Canada’s Cold War Museum, would like to thank you for actively contributing to enhancing understandings of Cold War history across Canada. Should you have any questions or feedback, please do not hesitate to contact us at 1-613-839-0007 ext. 223 or education@diefenbunker.ca.

Curriculum

Lesson: The Cold War: Communities in the Cold War	Level: New Brunswick/Nova Scotia, Grade 8 Social Studies Duration: 30 minutes
Topics	Communities, The Cold War, Mapping
Curriculum Expectations	Social Studies 8 Specific Curriculum Outcomes 1.1 Identify and locate the Atlantic region in the Canadian, North American, and global contexts 1.2 Describe the area, size, and physical features of Atlantic Canada

	1.4 Link human activity to the natural resources of the Atlantic region Outcome Goals Skills: Critical thinking, creative thinking; Examining primary and secondary sources to study historical and current information
Learning Goals	In this lesson, students will contrast a modern map with Cold War-era maps, examining them critically for bias and using the maps to interpret how Canada as a world community has evolved over time.
Materials/Resources	Access to the internet or one atlas for every two students in the class, and Cold War world maps (copies of maps included in following pages or in web links below) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Figure 1. Soviet-made Cold War map: 1928 Atlas of the USSR world map, found online here • Figure 2. American-made Cold War map: John Birch Society pamphlet map, published 1980, found online here
Instructional Methodology	Map-making, compare and contrast, and class discussion
Pre-Lesson	Students should be introduced to the Cold War and the Diefenbunker through the use of the provided package materials
Introductory Activity/Hook	In groups of two, students will search for a world map of their preference either online or in an atlas. The world map should be up-to-date (2007 or later).
Lesson Outline	After introducing the topics and the activity, the students will discuss with their partners the following questions: What types of communities are identified in the map and how are they divided (geographically, politically, nations/provinces/states/cities, etc.)? Where is Canada on the map and how is it depicted in terms of location, size, colour, and other details? Atlantic Canada? What other regions in the world contain similar physical characteristics to Canada, particularly to

	Atlantic Canada? How does this physical environment impact the lives of people, and how have people in various similar regions around the world responded to their environments? Be specific regarding the regions and the responses. The teacher will then show the students the world maps that were published during the Cold War in the USSR and Canada, either using a projector screen or by handing out photocopies. In small groups of 3-4 people, the students will compile lists of the major differences they notice between their map and the Cold War maps. Ask them to identify how physical characteristics are depicted differently in the Cold War-era maps.
Closure	The teacher will call on a representative from each small group to share their group’s findings with the class, compiling a master list on the whiteboard for the whole class.
Assessment/Evaluation	Class discussion and participation
Implications for Future Lessons	This lesson links naturally with further work in comparing and contrasting maps, recognizing bias, and critically analyzing primary historical documents.
